Let's say you had a bank account that deposited $86,400 every morning. However, the account carries over no balance from day to day, doesn't allow you to keep a cash balance, and every evening cancels whatever part of the amount you didn't use during the day. What would you do? Probably draw out every dollar every day!

We all have this bank—it is called Time. Every morning, it credits you with 86,400 seconds. Every night it writes off whatever time you have failed to use wisely. It carries over no balance from day to day.

It allows no overdraft so you can't borrow against yourself or use more time than you have. Each day, the account starts fresh. If you fail to use the day's deposits, it's your loss and you can't appeal to get it back.

The Moral:

There is no such thing as borrowing time. You can't take a loan out on your time or against someone else's. The time you have is the time you have. Just as it is with money, time management is yours to decide how you spend it.. It is rarely the case of us not having the time to do things, but the case of whether we want to do them and where they fall in our priorities.

I hope you didn't take it personally, preacher," an embarrassed woman said after a church service, "when my husband walked out during your sermon."

"I did find it rather disconcerting," the Pastor replied.

"It wasn't out of any disrespect to you," insisted the church-goer.

"Fred has been walking in his sleep ever since he was a child."

One night four college kids stayed out late, partying and having a good time. They paid no mind to the test they had scheduled for the next day and didn't study. In the morning, they hatched a plan to get out of taking their test. They covered themselves with grease and dirt and went to the Dean's office. Once there, they said they had been to a wedding the previous night and on the way back they got a flat tire and had to push the car back to campus. The Dean listened to their tale of woe and thought. He offered them a retest three days later. They thanked him and accepted his offer. When the test day arrived, they went to the Dean. The Dean put them all in separate rooms for the test. They were fine with this since they had all studied hard. Then they saw the test. It had 2 questions.

1) Your Name _____ (1 Points)

2) Which tire burst? _____ (99 Points)

Options – (a) Front Left (b) Front Right (c) Back Left (d) Back Right

The lesson: always be responsible and make wise decisions.

A 24 year old boy seeing out from the train's window shouted...
 "Dad, look the trees are going behind!"
 Dad smiled and a young couple sitting nearby, looked at the 24 year old's childish behavior with pity, suddenly he again exclaimed...
 "Dad, look the clouds are running with us!"
 The couple couldn't resist and said to the old man...
 "Why don't you take your son to a good doctor?" The old man smiled and said... "I did and we are just coming from the hospital, my son was blind from birth, he just got his eyes today."
 Every single person on the planet has a story. Don't judge people before you truly know them. The truth might surprise you.
